Methodology of the intersessional thematic consultations towards the 11th session of the OEIGWG:

- This methodology is conceived as a “living document”, subject to practical adjustments and improvements according to the developments of the intersessional thematic consultations towards the 11th session of the OEIGWG, for which the Chair-Rapporteur remains open to receive any suggestions from States and observers, with a view to enhance the implementation of HRC decision 56/116 and the achievement of the objective HRC Resolution 26/9.
- Approximately two weeks prior to each intersessional thematic consultations, the Chair-Rapporteur will make available a short non-paper (with no status for the negotiations and only conceived as “food for thought” that allows to trigger more focused discussions), prepared with the assistance of the legal experts, addressing the core elements of the relevant article(s) and theme(s) under the respective cluster, taking into account the comments and proposals presented by States and observers during the 10th session of the OEIGWG, including in particular the main areas of divergence.
- During the first day of each intersessional thematic consultation the Chair-Rapporteur, with the assistance of one legal expert to be designated among themselves after their internal coordination, will introduce the non-paper addressing the core elements of the relevant article(s) and theme(s) under the respective cluster, taking into account the comments and proposals presented by States and observers during the 10th session of the OEIGWG, including in particular the main areas of divergence.
- Following the introduction of the non-paper, the Chair-Rapporteur will request comments from States and other relevant stakeholders, on the non-paper addressing the core elements of the relevant article(s) and theme(s) under the respective cluster.
  - Speaking time: State delegations do not have a specific time limit for their interventions in this segment, but are strongly encouraged to keep those interventions focused on comments on the non-paper, and additional or updated textual proposals on the most essential elements of each provision that were not presented during the 10th session of the OEIGWG.
  - Delegations from other relevant stakeholders, should limit their interventions to a maximum of 3 minutes for joint interventions, and 2 minutes for individual comments and textual proposals, with the same focused approach.
  - The discussion during the intersessional thematic consultations will be based on the “Updated draft legally binding instrument with the textual proposals submitted by States during the tenth session”.
- At any moment of the intersessional thematic consultations, States and other relevant stakeholders may address specific questions to the legal experts, through the Chair-Rapporteur, in relation to the non-paper and the core elements of the relevant article(s) and theme(s), including the main areas of divergence mentioned above. The Chair-Rapporteur will require that responses and advice from the legal experts remain concise and technical, with a view to promote an inclusive, constructive, interactive and effective dialogue among States, and to facilitate the understanding of the legal implications of the proposals, as well as the identification of possible elements of convergence.
- During the second day of each intersessional thematic consultations, the Chair-Rapporteur will request that one legal expert be designated among themselves after their internal coordination, to present textual proposal(s) with options or possible solutions to the divergences identified during the 10th session and during the first part of each intersessional thematic consultation, including with their legal sources, for the consideration and discussion by the States and other relevant stakeholders.
- At least one month prior to the 11th session of the OEIGWG, the Chair-Rapporteur will make available a summary report of the intersessional thematic consultations, with a view to inform and support that session of the OEIGWG, in accordance with the mandate of Decision 56/116.
